Students with holds are able to submit an online course drop request via myNortheastern. Undergraduate student drop requests require academic advisor approval and will move through a workflow to capture that approval. All other student level requests will route directly to the Registrar’s Office for review.

Before Submitting a Course Drop Request

- Ensure that you have a registration-blocking hold that prevents you from dropping a class yourself via the registration system in myNortheastern.
  - If you do not have such a hold, please drop the class yourself and do not submit the online course drop request.
    - Any course drop requests submitted by students who do not have registration-blocking holds will not be processed by the Registrar’s Office.
- Contact your academic advisor/student service office to discuss your intention to drop the class(es) and the potential consequences this could have on your degree completion timeline/progress or student status.
- International students should contact the Office of Global Services (OGS) before requesting to drop a class to discuss compliance.
